Caring and care giving for the dying child (This heading identifies those many audiovisual materials developed to teach understanding of the nature of the dying experience, thoughtful sympathy for the dying patient, and the ability to relate with and effectively meet the needs of the patient and family members, whether those needs are medical, emotional, psychological, social, spiritual, or practical. Each item is labeled for potential audience appeal, but the reader will have to assess her or his own needs and experience in making choices. Some items obviously appeal to sophisticated medical professionals with specialized interests, but most of these audiovisuals, even those ostensibly addressed to care givers, have value for any audience of mature adults who want to relate better to the dying. By the same token, many audiovisual items addressed to general adult audiences have much to offer medical professionals who have not had occasion to acquire the relevant skills or experience.), 12, 17, 18, 23–26, 29, 30, 40, 41, 55, 56, 58, 62, 78, 80, 81, 86, 88, 90, 92, 96, 135
